2017 Undergraduate Nursing Scholars Day

PTSD in veterans, risky teen behaviors, mobile apps to promote breastfeeding, health problems in LGBT populations, and pediatric palliative care are just a few of the topics tackled by Undergraduate Nursing Scholars, showcased during Research Expo Week on Thursday, April 27. Posters were presented in the Driscoll Hall Lobby and four students presented their research during an evening event. It was an impressive way to gain insight into nursing science through the work of the College of Nursing students.

Dr. Melissa O'Connor honored for research

Assistant Professor Melissa O'Connor, PhD, MBA, RN, COS-C was honored by the Eastern Nursing Research Society with its Rising Star Research Award at its 29th Annual Scientific Sessions held in Philadelphia in early April. The award is given to a junior investigator who has shown promise in establishing a program of nursing research. Dr. O'Connor is a recognized expert in geriatric and home health care. Her research aids health care providers in clinical decision-making and care management and, in parallel, helps the elderly age in place in the community, thus avoiding hospitalization. She frequently uses large data sets in her studies. Her work indicates the unique contributions of skilled nursing care in support of the goal of community-based care for older adults.

Congratulations to Catherine (Katie) DeLuca, Nursing's recent Meyer ICE award winner on April 20th for her study "High School Students and Sexting: Is there a Relationship between Online Risks and Health Risk Behaviors?" She is seen here with her research mentor Dr. Elizabeth Dowdell, Assistant Dean and Director of the Undergraduate Program Dr. Angelina Arcamone and Associate Dean Dr. Lesley Perry. Katie was an inaugural Villanova Freshman Match research student and presented her research in early April at the ENRS Scientific Sessions in Philadelphia.

Nursing - Football partnership yields bone marrow donor registrants

"Get in the game. Save a life."...On April 19th, a longstanding partnership between nursing and the football team once again yielded additional bone marrow donor registrants as part of the annual Coach Andy Talley Bone Marrow Donor Drive. College of Nursing clinical groups, with faculty Dr. Carol Weingarten, worked alongside members of the football team to educate prospective registrants and assist them with obtaining cheek swab tissue samples. The Andy Talley Bone Marrow Foundation has the support of 78 college football teams, adding over 71,000 donors thus far to the registry, and is responsible for 363 transplants, according to its website.
